

Contribution ID: 157

Type: Poster

Science communication as an important aspect of promoting research to the public

Tuesday, 15 March 2022 16:26 (1 minute)

Science communication is becoming an important aspect in today's sciences. It is evident that it is necessary for scientists not only to sit in their ivory towers and conduct research, but also to communicate this research interactively with other scientists and to involve the interested public in new scientific developments. Here it is not only important to bring research closer to adults and young people, but the involvement in current research should take place as early as possible.

Primary author: Dr KALIWODA, Melanie (MSM - LMU)

Presenter: Dr KALIWODA, Melanie (MSM - LMU)

Session Classification: Postersession

Track Classification: Main conference: Crystallography in Education, Art, and Society