20 years of public engagement with science

Monday, 29 May 2017 14:45 (30 minutes)

Ciência Viva is a Portuguese Agency to promote scientific culture, collaborating with scientists, teachers and other educators to engage the public with science. Since 1996, a national network of science centers was created and connected with international networks and intergovernmental research institutions. The engagement of scientists and teachers resulted both from an assertive political priority and the mobilization of the society.
